SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF CONTRIBUTORS.

Tuesday, January 5th, 1858.

At a meeting of the contributors to the Hospital of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, held this day, pursuant to the charter, at the Office, 524 Walnut St., Clayton T. Platt, Esq., was called to the Chair, and Dr. Kenderdine, was appointed Secretary.

The report of the Board of Managers, together with the annual statements and accounts was presented, and referred to the same Board for publication.

The following gentlemen were elected Managers for a term of three years, to supply the places of those whose terms expired this day.

SIXTH ANNUAL REPORT.

December 31st, 1857.

TO THE CONTRIBUTORS:

The Managers of the Hospital enter, for the sixth time, upon the discharge of their annual duty, in unfeigned and humble thankfulness to an All-wise and Merciful Providence, that, notwithstanding the unexampled financial crisis which has troubled the public and private interests of our whole community, they are enabled to report an unabated activity in the usefulness of the limited means, which the institution under their charge has been permitted to employ; and to note a sensibly growing appreciation of its benefits among the rich and the poor inhabitants of the neighborhood in which it has been established.

Although this moderate progress might have been regarded with so much greater pleasure had their resources been, in any degree, commensurate with the designs and hopes of the founders of the Hospital, they are, nevertheless, happy to congratulate the contributors upon the evidence presented by the annual statements, that the multiplying demands upon the kind services of the officers have been met with encouraging efficiency, and a self-denying zeal that is worthy of a far more ample measure of support.

The whole number of patients treated in the wards, during the year, was three hundred and thirty-eight (338); the average daily number of these having been thirty, and their average term of residence about thirty-five days and a half. In addition to these cases in the house, two thousand one hundred and thirty-six (2136) out-door cases were prescribed for and furnished with medicines at the Hospital or at their own homes in its vicinity.

This shows an increase for the year just closed, over the number of patients attended to in the previous year, of three hundred and forty-five. As, moreover, there are but thirty beds altogether in the Hospital, the average number of inmates, above stated, proves the wards to have been generally occupied to their utmost proper capacity. It is well known, however, that this number has been repeatedly exceeded, under press of recent accidents and other exigencies which frequently occur; and we are told that at one time it amounted to forty-one, or eleven more than the actual number of regular beds.

Such crowding of the wards, notwithstanding the embarrassment created within, very slightly lessens the difficulty of selection from without; while it is so far from meeting the demand for places, that, for some time past, five applicants are said to have been rejected for every one admitted.

It is not denied that many of the unsuccessful applicants may be improper cases; and that some, at least, of those who are thus allowed to fill up the house are too apt to be invalids more in need of an asylum or comfortable home than of the cramped lodgings in an overflowing hospital; and whose symptoms may be aggravated rather than removed by the influences to which their occupation of the sick wards necessarily subjects them. Still, we may readily imagine, from this condition of the Hospital, overwhelmed within and besieged by a continually disappointed crowd without, how urgent is the necessity for unceasing efforts, on the part of the friends of the institution who desire to help the most deserving poor—especially within the household of the faith—to obtain that material aid, without which the abundant opportunity, which here appeals from day to day in one of its most heart-stirring forms, must continue to be lost.

The character and extent of the field, whether for missionary or merely charitable purposes, in which our Hospital is planted, has been so often dwelt upon, that it would seem hardly worth while to allude to it again. To those, however, who have thought too little of our enterprise in these relations, or whose interest in its welfare has been diminished by the comparative remoteness of its objects, it may be well once more to say, that the position of the Hospital constitutes one of its strongest claims upon the sympathies and active assistance of the benevolent of all parts of the city.

The amount of destitution in the Nineteenth ward, always as great in proportion to the population as that of any other, has, under the recent convulsions of business, increased to such a disastrous extent as to have alarmed the wealthier residents, and aroused them to repeated strong appeals to their fellow citizens of other wards, in behalf of the gathering swarms of helpless families around them.

This ward includes the old district of Richmond, and a part of Kensington, and is said to have a larger number of inhabitants than either of the others. By far the majority of these inhabitants belong to the laboring class, honest, industrious, and anxious to work while they are able; but of course as necessitous as they are deserving when disabled by sickness or injury, or deprived, through the reverses of their employers, of their only means of subsistence. Want and its concomitant distresses being notoriously fruitful causes of disease, the calls upon the Hospital by those who are best entitled to its care, the hard-working poor, must seriously increase from most parts of the city; but above all, from the very district in the midst of which it has pleased the Disposer of events to place it.

We do not mean to insist upon the claims of the residents of the Nineteenth ward, to the exclusion or detriment of others; but we do consider that the Hospital, being more than two miles from any other similar establishment, yet in the centre of a populous and rapidly improving neighborhood and surrounded by an unusually large proportion of the very class who most require its aid, is manifestly entitled to a great deal more of practical attention than it has hitherto received, even from the active members of our Church.

The completion of the Frankford and City Railroad is, for obvious reasons, a matter of especial gratification to the Board of Managers. It is regarded as the probable means of extended usefulness and prosperity to their infant institution in various ways; at the same time that the vastly increased accessibility of the Hospital must correspondingly increase the calls upon its charity, and the consequent responsibility of all who are expected to contribute to its support.

The considerations suggested by the impossibility of accommodating a large share of the growing crowd of applicants for treatment in the house, naturally remind us of the defective arrangements of the house itself. No one, familiar with the present needs of the Hospital, however well pleased with it at an earlier date, can fail, in visiting the different apartments which are occupied as wards, to lament their present inadequacy for the important purposes to which they have been dedicated. They are awkwardly arranged, much too contracted and very badly ventilated. Officers as well as patients are more or less the sufferers in consequence; and constant difficulty is experienced in distributing the inmates. On the lower floor especially, the medical and surgical cases are so mingled together as to lead to frequent confusion.

The most pressing deficiency is that of an operating chamber for the surgeons. Such a room might be used also as an examining and prescribing room, particularly for female patients. The absence of a receiving apartment, for the latter to retire to from the public hall, which has hitherto served instead, is justly regretted as seriously inconvenient to all parties; but it is scarcely less so than that of a place in which operations may be performed without exposure of the sufferer to others in a ward, or subjecting these latter to the excitement of such scenes.

We are convinced of the necessity for commencing, at the earliest practicable period, on the contemplated Hospital building. There can be no hope of satisfying even a respectable portion of the demands which are likely to increase upon us from year to year, until the new house has been so far advanced as to be, at least in part, available for occupation. It is our earnest desire, therefore, that the contributions to the building fund be enlarged as speedily as possible; and that, at all events, a plan be adopted without delay, and that its precise location in the grounds be finally determined.

The adoption of a plan of building and the precise location of the edifice would much facilitate the general improvement of the grounds, especially as to the planting and arrangement of the trees and shrubbery, which cannot be too soon commenced in order to render the place the health-restoring and attractive one it might become within a very few years.

The general hospital, offering its fostering care to every form of human suffering, without distinction of creed, color or country, which was designed at the outset, and of which the germ only has thus far been presented, might be at once developed into full grown activity were the capacity of the arrangements and the extent of our income such as to warrant the admission of the unfortunates who are already thronging and crying at the doors.

Under these circumstances the smallest actual beginning, on the spot, might effect much good, were it only to cheer with renewed hope the few who have long had the project most at heart, and to enable them to attract with a more definite prospect many others who have turned a deaf ear to previous appeals.

In illustration of the increasing favor which the Hospital is drawing to itself we take pleasure in acknowledging some very handsome and substantial manifestations of practical regard in the shape of donations.

First, we have to thank our fellow Manager and late Secretary of the Board, Francis Wharton, Esqr., for the liberality with which he has so kindly added to the numerous obligations previously conferred, the gift of the valuable carriage and horse, the use of which the Hospital has enjoyed for some months past. The next donation claiming notice is that of thirty-two yards of superior ingrain carpeting, fresh from the manufactory of Mr. Wm. Hogg, of Oxford street. It was presented by the manufacturer, as a willing tribute to the usefulness of the Hospital in the district, of which his own observation, as a resident in the neighborhood, had fully convinced him.

We are indebted, also, to the considerate attention of the Rector (Rev. Kingston Goddard) and Vestry of the Church of the Atonement, for a similar present, which, like its predecessor, was thankfully received, and has proved itself a welcome addition to the comfort of the officers.

We gladly avail ourselves of the occasion to express our confidence in the integrity, ability and zeal of the Steward and Matron, and of the Attending and Resident Physicians and Surgeons; and we desire particularly to acknowledge our obligations to them for the successful manner in which they have advanced the reputation of the Hospital and augmented its usefulness, in the face of many difficulties and discouragements inseparable from the straitened condition of the house and its funds.

Although, yet, without the advantage of a regular Chaplain, we are indebted to the kindness of the Rev. J. Rudderow for visits and stated services twice a week; and to several gentlemen, for regular services on Sunday afternoons.

The statistics, which we owe to Dr. Schell and Mr. Greetham, will be found to be unusually full and interesting; and may afford some idea of the progress and general movement of the Hospital in its medical and surgical departments from the beginning to the present date.

In concluding their report, the Managers feel imperatively called upon to make another earnest appeal in behalf of the building fund, and for a larger share of annual contributions. The collections for the year have yielded only about three thousand dollars ($3000 00).

The expenses, including salaries and indispensable improvements were six thousand five hundred and seventy-two dollars ($6572 78).

The average cost of each patient was three dollars and sixty-one cents ($3 61) per week.

There is reason to hope that this average cost may be still further reduced ; but this slight saving, in all probability, will be more than counterbalanced by the additional cost of the out-door dispensary, which has become so important an agent in the administration of the charity of the Hospital.

We anxiously hope, thererefore, that renewed efforts will be made to meet the accumulating demands upon the Hospital.

The need presses most heavily because of the irresistibly strong claims of a new host of applicants who are rarely seen, in ordinary times, as petitioners of any kind of bounty—those whom the recent financial storm has driven, and is daily driving, hungry, cold and sick, from their once happy homes. The general activity exhibited by our citizens in forming ward associations and raising funds for the poor, shows that the community is awake to the unwonted cries of those who, for the first time, want bread and fuel and clothing. Surely the necessity in regard to disease, which is the inevitable offspring of insufficient food and warmth, is no less manifest nor less entitled, by every consideration of humanity and policy, to a cordial and prompt attention.

REPORT OF CASES TREATED IN 1857.

During the year, there have been three hundred and ten cases, admitted into the Episcopal Hospital, making, with twenty-eight remaining in the house at the last report, three hundred and thirty-eight cases under treatment during the year.

Of these, one hundred and sixty-one were medical and one hundred and seventy-seven surgical. Two thousand one hundred and thirty-six out-door cases have been prescribed for and furnished with medicines by the resident Physicians, either in the hall of the building or at the homes of the patients according to the severity of the cases. There were three hundred and sixty-seven more out-door cases prescribed for during this year than the last.

In the following abstract of the in-door cases, the majority of those in the second and third columns eloped or were removed by their friends, or were discharged at their own request, before sufficient time had elapsed for the full beneficial result to be obtained from medical treatment.
